

Why Young Ghanaians Fear Investing - And How You'll Overcome It This Year

Dating should be fun...

So why is your bank account in recovery mode every Monday?

If you've ever said:

"I can't afford love."

"Why am I always broke after dating?"

This is your intervention.

Love should not bankrupt you.

The Real Problem

Dating broke isn't about having no money. It's about making choices that keep you stuck.

You might be:

- Overspending to impress
- Paying for everything alone
- Ignoring your savings goals
- Dating someone with zero financial discipline

Newsflash:

Romance \neq Financial performance

Real love grows with honesty, not overspending.

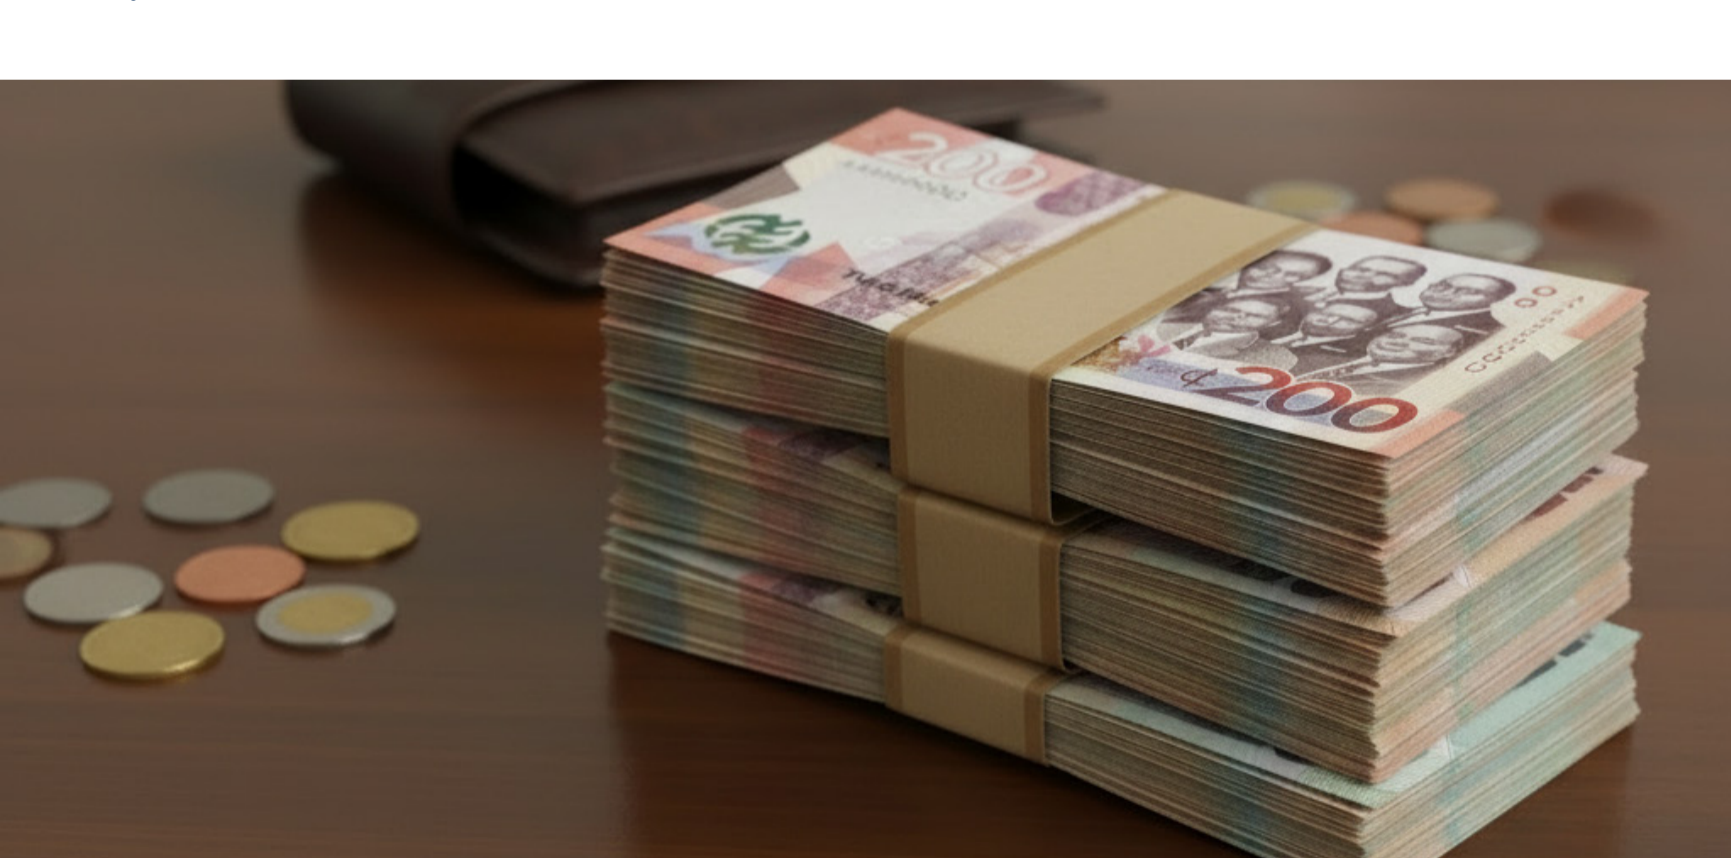

Date Smart, Not Expensive

Choose someone who:

- Respects budgeting
- Has goals beyond "soft life" spending
- Supports your growth
- Wants to build, not drain

Set boundaries early:

- "I'm focused on saving and investing, so let's mix in chill dates too."
- The best couples don't just plan vacations and plan futures.

Don't Let Your Money Sleep

While you're dating...
Your money should be working.

Instead of spending everything:

- Invest consistently
- Automate it
- Create goals for things like trips, or "random dates"

Balance is the goal:
Love + Financial Security.

So maybe...
Break up.
(With dating broke.)